MILLER AGAIN NEARLY KILLED

DRY SUNDAY FOR THE TENDERLOIN IS O'BRIEN'S ORDER

New Czar Has Bolted Down the Lid and Bingham Praises Him—Other Captains Under Druhan Also After Saloon Men.

The lid is on tight in the Tenderloin and the whole west side will be dry as bone to-morrow, the police say. Following Capt. Steve O'Brien's special instructions to his patrolmen that he will hold them personally responsible for violations of excise laws, Capt. Burleif, of West Sixty-eighth street, and Capt. Zimmerman of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, have indicated that they will set lifewalls.

Stryker's farm and the wood alcohol belt will rival the horrors of dryest Hoboken, and it is evident that Inspector Druhan is going to make himself felt for at least one Sunday, he never gets another chance.

As soon as O'Brien's orders were assigned to O'Brien where Hodges had made public it was asked whether similar orders were to be enforced in view that Bingham intends to give the new Czar the assistance of his poolroom squad, under Detective Sergeant McNaught, who is assisted by Sergt. Costigan, formerly head of the vice squad.

A crowd of ten thousand gave testimony to the fact that the New Yorkans will follow a winning team. The loss of the first game at home was a cruel blow to the present leaders of the American League.

All Must Keep Closed.
"I shall enforce the laws as I always have wherever I am placed," he said. "The law reads but one way and must be enforced. It may be the saloons must close Sundays and I am here to see that they are closed tight at midnight. The question is hardly necessary."

Capt. Burleif, an absent at the time the West Sixty-eighth Street Station was visited, but his sergeant, speaking for him, said:

"We will close everything tight at midnight. The captain, his sergeants and roundamen will make an inspection tour after midnight to see that the patrolmen have done their duty in the matter of excise laws. You can safely say that from midnight until Monday morning there will be nothing doing. It will be a dry day in the wood alcohol belt."

Bingham Is Pleased.
Police Commissioner Bingham was almost joyous to-day when he heard that Capt. Stephen O'Brien had bolted the lid on in the Tenderloin, besides arresting bartenders in three saloons and closing all of the resorts of the Bohemia and Haymarket variety at 1 o'clock this morning the new commander of the precinct informed his policemen that every saloon in the district was to be closed tight all of Sunday.

"That's what I put him there for," the Commissioner said. "And all you have to do is to know that he is not to be hampered by any outside influence is to watch him and watch me."

"When I put O'Brien in the Tenderloin I gave him an absolutely free hand. He knows the laws and he knows what to do. I believe him one of the most capable men in the department, and I am going to see to it he is not interfered with."

When the Commissioner intimated that O'Brien had planned to close every saloon in the Tenderloin on Sunday—and closed so that no liquor is sold—some one suggested that the people of New York did not care for such strict enforcement.

"That's just the trouble with the American people. They can have any kind of a law passed they want, but they give too little attention to the matter of legislation and too much energy to the business of making money. Capt. O'Brien is in the Tenderloin to enforce the laws as they exist and not to interpret the wishes of the people. If the people do not want the laws as they exist, then can go to Albany and have them changed, if they will take the trouble."

When the night shift went on post last evening Capt. O'Brien said:

"I want this precinct cleaned up now. Bars must close at 1 o'clock and Saturday nights at 12. I'll hold each one of you individually responsible. Can I make myself plainer?"

Evidently he could, for Policeman Ben Smith, who for years has walked beneath the bright lights of Sixth Avenue between Thirty-second and Twenty-eighth streets, was transferred to a dark post on Park Avenue.

Three saloons where the Excise law has been more honored in the breach than in the observance were shut tight as a drum, and the barkeepers taken over to the Tenderloin station for selling liquor after hours. These places were McDonald's Hotel, No. 125 Broadway, Paddy McGirr's, No. 65 Sixth Avenue, and T. J. Shinn's, No. 616 Sixth Avenue.

Two of these places are on Smith's old beat.

AMERICAN LEAGUE PARK, July 7.—The Highlanders made a grand stand dash against St. Louis this afternoon, but it was all in vain. Clark Griffith made a strenuous effort to save the day after a combination of Ruth and Orth had pressed the visitors with seven runs in the first two innings.

The Browns were effective at the bat, gathering thirteen hits.

The Highlanders also accomplished some feats with the willow, scoring eleven hits, which, however, were not carefully placed. Griffith relieved Orth in the middle of the second inning and showed his old form throughout the remainder of the game.

A crowd of ten thousand gave testimony to the fact that the New Yorkans will follow a winning team. The loss of the first game at home was a cruel blow to the present leaders of the American League.

A crowd in the white-light district to-day that the Haymarket, Cairo, Bohemia and Little German Village had received notices from the station-house that they must close promptly at midnight to-night or be raided. It was said that the order came direct from the Captain, and it would be obeyed.
